know how to pay for their supper, were soon all in uproarious laughter at everything Burnand said, even when he repeated jokes from Punch.

Gilbert felt his nose very much out of joint, and yet could not think of a witticism to draw the fire of laughter. But he thought of this. Turning to Carr he said: "Joe, whatever I say, you laugh at it."

Carr understood. Timing himself when the next roar from the other end of the table was subsiding, Gilbert whispered to Carr, "Pass the mustard." Carr nearly fell in a fit of laughter, and Gilbert looked shyly conscious. It distracted Burnand, who came back with a horribly weak joke, which passed with only half a laugh from the chorus who were anxious to hear what Gilbert was saying to convulse Carr.

Gilbert leaned over to his companion and whispered: "It's been a beastly day, Joe." Carr's merriment seemed to threaten apoplexy, and Burnand was visibly put out.

Bancroft called down the table: "I say, Carr, what's Gilbert getting off to you that's so deuced funny?"

"Oh, nothing much," answered Carr, wiping his eyes, with the manner of a man who had something too good to give away.

Burnand returned again to the charge, and fired off something which his anxiety to be funny made dismal. Gilbert noted the failure, and whispered to Carr, "Can you reach the salt?" Carr pushed back his chair and held his sides in an agony of merriment.

Burnand was done for. He tried another joke and went to pieces, while Gilbert and Carr repeated their business. Burnand lost his temper and exclaimed: "I say, Gilbert, what's that you're telling to Carr? Some of those funny things you send me for Punch—that don't get in?"

It was a fatal opening. Gilbert answered instantly: "I don't know who sends the funny things to Punch; but I know they don't get in."

STORYETTES.

Several years ago a London Hebrew, Abraham Solomon, painted a stirring picture, "Waiting for the Verdict," which was exhibited at the Royal Academy. The artist, not being a Royal Academician, entitled to annex R. A. to his name, had his painting "skied." All the pictures contributed by that august fraternity were, as usual, hung on the line. Thomas Landseer was in ecstasies as he beheld the thrilling scene depicted on the canvas, and exclaimed: "There is Solomon in all his glory, but not R. A. I'd like one of these!"

The Breckinridge referred to in Dr. Briggs' letter as belonging to the "reactionary school of theologians" was the celebrated Presbyterian minister of Kentucky. He was engaged in many bitter controversies, one of which was with Mr. Crittenden. At the conclusion of one of his fierce attacks on that gentleman, he said: "But may God Almighty forgive you, as I do." Tom Marshall, after reading the diatribe, said: "That's Christian-like; but if God Almighty forgives Mr. Crittenden as Dr. Breckinridge does, won't he catch hades in the other world?"

Charles Gervais, the great French cheese merchant, who recently died in Paris, full of years and honors, and wealth, was a self-made man and no scholar. Last year he stood for some municipal post in the Department of Seine-Inférieure, and in the course of his campaign, read a speech composed for him by a journalist of Rouen, beginning as follows: "As a candidate for this important office—comma—fully understanding your wants—comma—I come to solicit your votes—full stop." The scribe had written down the stops as a guide to elocution, but poor M. Gervais conscientiously delivered it as a part of his speech.

The "Saunterer" of the Boston Budget tells of a college professor whose house was just beside a dormitory inhabited by a rather fast set. One night the neighborhood was awakened by an enormous clatter. On the professor's steps was a much-befuddled student knocking the knocker, kicking the door, and raising a row generally, and above was the night-capped head of the professor, vainly trying to make himself heard above the din. Finally there came a lull. "What do you want?" called the exasperated professor. "Want 'it stay here all night," said the student. "Well," said the professor, "if it'll do you any good, stay there!" and he slammed down the window.

A girl, in a Maine village, who made her home with her aunt, was often disturbed (says the Lewiston Journal) by evidences of the old lady's indifference to everything but the welfare of her own material possessions. One day, in going down cellar for some butter, she tripped and fell heavily quite a distance. The maiden aunt rushed to the door, and peering down into the darkness, called out sharply: "Dye break the dish?" "No!" thundered back the niece, for once thoroughly aroused; "not but I will!" and she shivered it with hearty good will against the cellar wall. The old lady was so shocked by this dramatic exhibition of malice that she took to her bed and kept it for a week.

Their Future Husbands.

At bedtime, having fasted since noon, two girls who wish to obtain a sight of their future husbands boil an egg, which must be the first egg ever laid by the hen, in a pan in which no egg has ever been boiled before. Having boiled it till it is hard they cut it in two with something that has never been used as a knife before. Each girl eats her half and its shell to the last fragment, speaking no word the while; then, still in silence, they walk backward to the bed, "to sleep, perchance to dream."—English Folk Rhymes.

Wampole's Tasteless Preparation

OF

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

Bishop, Editor; published monthly, at $2 per annum, devoted to the religious and educational interests of these islands, as also a recorder of political and other current events. Sample copies mailed to any address. A limited number of advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

The Hawaiian Annual now in its Nineteenth year, and acknowledged not only as the best authority on all information pertaining to the islands that residents should know and strangers invariably ask, but the only reference book of Hawaiian statistics, and annual recorder of current and reminiscence events. There are no homes probably in this land in which it is unknown, except by name, and there are numerous friends abroad to whom this publication would afford untold satisfaction for the fund of reliable information it imports in its one hundred and fifty or more pages, with nothing of the "Guide Book" gush about it. Price per copy to any address in these islands, 75 cents; or mailed to any address in the Postal Union for 85 cents each.
